The Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) is an advanced-level, terminal degree for MSN graduates who wish to become influential in nursing practice, administration, and education. The program focuses on the development of nurse leaders who use evidence-based practice for optimizing health care delivery through effective systems transformation. As a graduate of the program, you'll be prepared for roles in direct or indirect systems-focused care.

The goal of DNP practice, in addition to providing excellent care to patients, is to optimize health care delivery through effective systems transformation, or planned change. As DNP graduates plan and implement their practice with individuals and populations, they integrate the spiritual, biological, social, psychological and cultural factors that influence human responses to health and illness.

Ursuline's DNP program is ranked
#2 among private colleges
in Ohio.
